Hilary Evans

Hilary Evans is an evolving painter who channels the essence of Irish landscapes and figures into captivating depictions through bold abstractions. As a former solicitor turned abstract artist, she truly immerses herself in her creative practice. Evans has revealed that painting offers her a departure from the structure of everyday life, allowing her to retreat into a world in which she can uncover vibrant imagery as she envisions it. In this sense, her artwork relays our experience of memories as she carves out nostalgic scenery from a blank canvas.

Evans' artistic eye developed over her study of interior design. She credits her understanding of colour theory to this period, which enables her to capture light, movement and dynamic compositions with distinctive flair in her paintings. Her use of the palette knife adds to her style, textured layers reflect a meditative process where she embraces spontaneity over precision.
