Stephanie Sloan

Stephanie Sloan is an Irish printmaker whose graphic use of colour has established her place among a wave of emerging contemporary artists. Working from a studio on the coastline of Co. Wicklow, Sloan's depictions of the natural world are imbued with illuminating colours and the charming characteristics of local scenery. Her process involves unifying technology and the organic process of printmaking to create captivating illustrative artworks. As such she captures the harmony of sea, sky and land through her graphic use of negative space, intriguing compositions and layering techniques.
