Mark P Cullen

Representing as one of Dublin's finest talents, Mark, uses a combination of various palette knives and brushes to form texture and grain and an aura of interaction and inclusivity within his work. Mark plays with depth, scale, and perspective to create a unique viewing experience. Through this he depicts areas around County Dublin in a bold, strongly contrasting palette. Gouging out and marking his work giving each painting an impression and a level of subtlety which lightens and elevates the overall compositions.

Hazel O'Sullivan

Hazel O'Sullivan has established herself as a trailblazer. She is a firebrand of emerging Irish talent. She is interested in socio-political issues and expresses them through geometric design. O'Sullivan juxtaposes between minimalism and architectural sculpture creating a vibrant narrative in her artwork. At just 24, she has already exhibited internationally. Her profundity to use perspective and proportion is mature, resulting in clean and striking compositions.

Helen Pomphrey

Helen Pomphrey has continued to develop her practice by continuously exploring new depths using mixed media and a consistent palette of blues, greens, and greys and a variety of mixed media to depict ethereal locations of significant places of importance. Throughout her career, her work harkens back to the Scottish Colourist movement, whilst putting her own unique Fauvist flavour with her compositions. Pomphrey employs techniques such as paper collage, photo transfer and print techniques to produce her signature, layered and textured work.
